So scream from the top of your lungs, everything will...
be alright.

Just keep telling the lies and avoid making eyes,
They'll believe, keep your cover.

She smiles (and says that everything is fine),
But we both know, you're not coming,
Not coming home tonight.

Hope is dust in the wind,
But you paint on that smile.
Don't look broken- or jaded,
Sink into denial.

Dreams shatter, can't pick up the pieces.
Too far gone, I guess this is goodbye.

First we burn the bridges,
Gabriel, we're never going home.
Trade our names for freedom,
Goodbye to all we know.

There's no turning back now,
Back's up against the wall.
No time it's now or never,
Stand your ground or fall.

Somebody save me from myself,
I'm lost in a body count,
Lying among the fallen.
(But don't call me forgotten)

Somebody save me from myself,
I'm lost in a body count,
Lying among the fallen.
(But don't call me forgotten)

I find myself mesmerized by the fire in your eyes,
Crumbling this city to it's burning knees,
Lighting our way back home.

Don't run now, never look back, this is our last chance

make it count.
We're bleeding but not broken.
We'll take our hearts and fight this battle,
Screaming.
You can't deny it, this will end to night, we will make it.
History, and when it's over, we'll all be chanting:

First we burn the bridges,
Gabriel, we're never going home.
Trade our names for freedom,
Goodbye to all we know.

There's no turning back now,
Back's up against the wall.
No time it's now or never,
Stand your ground or fall.

Don't run now, never look back, this is our last chance
make it count.
We're bleeding, but not broken.
We'll take our hearts and fight this battle,
Screaming.
Don't shake, it'll all be over soon.

Go.
Your darkest hour is only 60 minutes long.
We'll make it out alive, I swear.
Stand don't you falter,
60 minutes long.
Your darkest hour is only
60 minutes
