I lie alone

I lie alone

"We gotta roll, we gotta roll..."

"Our captain spotted a, erm, an tread and he told the Gardner to engage and the Gardner engaged and destroyed the target."

"You know I used to been shot at, and we were right there when it happening."

I lie alone

The fog surrounds me and I know that it's not right

I must escape this awful state of night

So here I tread

And standing still without a phase of sight to dread

The noise completes the pictures in my head

You learn you must surrender

It's taken time for you to realize

That what you felt was not forever

You find you must surrender

And now you see the world with no disguise

It takes you in and grasps forever

"Since then we've seen a lot of a, a bombs and missiles going on... That last time when it hit so close to us, it was, it was very, erm, eye-opening..."

The rain pours down on me

The clarity I sought would make us free

But in the depths of fate

The answers drowned beneath this mud of hate

I gasp to breathe the cause

That brought us to this place yet here we pause

And in the fear of dawn

The innocence I dreamt about is gone

You learn you must surrender

It's taken time for you to realize

That what you felt is not forever

You find you must surrender

And now you see the world with no disguise
It takes you in, it grasps forever

You find you must surrender
And now you see the world with new eyes
The love you felt was not forever
You find you must surrender
And now you see the world with new eyes
And taste the truth of now and never

I'm alone

The rain pours down on me
The clarity I sought would make us free
But in the fear of dawn
The innocence I dreamt about is gone
