She don't have to speak to show her beauty
No she don't have to speak to show her beauty at all

She looks up at the sky,
But not just as a witness because she knows that she's a part of it all,
She carries on her fortune,
Through suffering and laughter but she needs no claim to be lord,
Mother nature

And she don't have to speak to show her beauty
No she don't have to speak to show her beauty at all

Between the highest mountains,
No valley will be left for it's own,
The wisdom of the Redwoods,
Without the seed we would not have known,

Mother Nature is painting a picture,
To prove that beauty don't need to be told,
To surpass all the boundaries of law that men hold

And she don't have to speak to show her beauty
No she don't have to speak to show her beauty at all

She carries all the burden,
Of seven billion merchants all looking after their own,
And when their children come,
They will still have a home,

She don't have to speak to show her beauty
No she don't have to speak to show her beauty at all
