Counting clouds in the sky
I see castles and mountains up there in disguise
Colors change with the light
It's too early to tell if I'll be alright
It's gotta be the best
And if it is, God I hope she's heading West

I pray for a sunset
One that she won't ever forget
To put her in that magical moment
When the world was right and she was mine
I hope that the sky can open her eyes
And remind her of all that she left
I pray for a sunset

I hope when she's driving away
She gets stuck on our memory of Montigo Bay
It might just change how she feels
If a rose red sunset burns through her windshield
She'll remember the kiss
'Cause the twilight skyline looked just like this

I pray for a sunset
One that she won't ever forget
To put her in that magical moment
When the world was right and she was mine
I hope that the sky can open her eyes
And remind her of all that she left
I pray for a sunset

Oh, there it is like a miracle
Blue and red and green and gold
Last chance to bring her home

I pray for a sunset
One that she won't ever forget
To put her in that magical moment
When the world was right and she was mine
I hope that the sky can open her eyes
And remind her of all that she left
All the love that nobody forgets

So baby please be looking West
At the sunset
I pray for this sunset
