In a little port on the outskirts of a town,
A young girl stands alone.
By this sea, there existed
An old tradition from before.

"Write your wish on a piece of parchment
And place it in a little bottle.
If you let it flow with the sea, someday
Your wish will come true."

Flow along, little glass bottle
With a message containing a wish.
On the other side of the horizon,
There, it quietly disappears.

You always did everything for my sake
All that I wanted, and yet
I was always so selfish
And troublesome to you.

You, who grant my wishes,
Are no longer here.
Will my thoughts, on this sea
Arrive at their destination?

Flow along, little wish
Tears and a little bit of regret.
When I had realized my sins,
It was always after everything was already over.

Flow along, little glass bottle
With a message containing a wish.
On the other side of the horizon,
There, it quietly disappears.

Flow along, little wish
Tears and a little bit of regret.
If we were to be reborn...
