My dream girl don't exist
At the age of five she slit her wrists
She didn't know that i'd be hanging around
So her parents buried her in the ground
To this day i can still hear the sound
Of a life in outer space

My dream girl don't exist
Its just you and i and this tv
And this illness seems to feel so strange
Like a hench man that's about to hang
The moon, up like a ball and chain
And set the sands ablaze

And the weight is waiting off
To feel the world so real and strung

My dream girl don't exist
Just a photograph in a history book
And i beleive she had a voice and name
Three children on the coast of maine
Her life was in a hurricane
Of love and real embrace

My dream girl don't exist
And at the age of five she slit her wrists
She didn't know that I'd be hanging around
So one day she took a stroll to town
And walked infront of a greyhound
Bound for new york central state

And the weight is waiting off
And the weight is waiting off
Fell the world so real and strung
And now she know, and knows she knows
She'll never be afraid
