All I perceive is wasted and broken
Silvery streams, sacred when spoken
Slam into me and into the ditch of debris
And you smoke in the park, you sleep in the greenery

Everyone barks but all still believing
To tear out your heart would send
All your secrets to me
But I let you down

And swollen and small is where you'll find me now
With that silver stripping off
From my tongue you're tearing out
And you'll never hear me talk

Your teeth believe that teeth are for tearing
Tear into me and the scent of you sweating
Smells good to me, as long as we keep in our clothes
And out in the dark, the world is still rolling

Kids in their cars, cigarette smoking
And all that they are
Just reeks with the sweetest belief
But I let you down

And swollen and small is where you'll find me now
With that silver stripping off
From my tongue you're tearing out
And you'll never hear me talk

All I could want, is silver and spinning
Out from your arms and into the pretty pit of your heart
So simply and softly we'd flow
But I let you down

And swollen and small is where you'll find me now
With that silver stripping off
From my tongue you're tearing out
And you'll never hear me talk

Into you I will glow
Into you
