Laying there watching you pass me by hoping something will click in your mind that you made a mistake about letting go of your love for me. Smile and wave and you don't say a word realizing you've made a mistake that you lost something special. Sitting in my computer chair hoping you will realize how much love I had for you and what you are missing out on. Days pass by and you realize you've missed out on such an amazing girl then you see her with someone else and you are wishing and thinking to yourself I wish that could be me. As I sit by my window looking out at the stars I think of you hoping you realize we may not ever be in love again but we will always be mutual friends.
