Trophies on my bedroom mantle never meant much to me.

It was all to make you happy or something of the sort.

Think I'll build a boat sail somewhere I can be myself.

But who is that?

Who is that?

Son it's not your fault.

You are who you are.

And I will lead you to where they won't make you small

Take me away where the monsters will play.

Take me away where they'll never see my face.

Take me away where the monsters will play.

Take me away where they'll never see my face.

Oh,

The ocean lead me somewhere,

The trees look like walls

I can hear the shouts and calls of creatures in the dark.

So scared freak out, lay low to the ground

Looking for a clearing I hear a voice from afar.

Son it's not your fault.

You are who you are.

I will lead you to where they won't make you small

Take me away where the monsters will play.

Take me away where they'll never see my face.

Take me away where the monsters will play.

Take me away where they'll never see my face.

Every dream has an end

A plot with a twist

It's time to surrender

Call it part of the plan

It's out of my hands

Swore I'd never be home sick but I am

Son it's not your fault.

You are who you are.

And I will lead you to where they won't make you small

Take me away where the monsters will play.
Take me away where they'll never see my face.
Take me away where the monsters will play.
Take me away where they'll never see my face.
They'll never see my face.
