if they had met an hour later fate might have left them misaligned but something put them on the same path and their lives collided and so their paths became entwined he was moving on to somewhere and she was waiting for a ride so he asked her if she'd pack her bags and take a drive and she told him that she just might yet from the start his heart was made up that he would not leave her behind they carried on and then they married and soon she carried their first child and all his naïve dreams he gathered up and buried and he ignored his spirit longing to be wild and though he gave up many things he cherished she was worth the sacrifice

she was his day his night and his will for living she was his hope, his fight, and his reason for giving

she was the perfect picture in her dress and her wedding ring
she was his everything, she was his everything but something went so wrong along the way and both of them were left unsatisfied and what she needed most to hear him say were the words he could not conjure up inside and what she felt for him just slipped away, and what they promised slowly died

she was his hope, his fight, and his reason for giving
she was the perfect picture in her dress and her
wedding ring

and where does he go from here, having lost everything where does he go from here, having lost everything where does he go from here
