I'm on a journey back to home.
For too long I've wandered on my own.
I stumbled on in darkness, searching for the light, You gave me sight.
Well, I looked for answers in this life of mine,
but they only left me empty,
I wasted all my time and then I found a reason that placed new hope inside, You gave me life.

'Cause You caused the blind to see
and the deaf to hear.
You see the broken-hearted
and You hold them near.
You heal the open wounds
caused by our iniquities.
You break the chains that bind us
and the darkness has to flee.
You set us free.

And on this journey back to home,
I face trials, but I'm never alone.
Awaiting the day in Heaven's rays,
I'll see His face.
No more will sorrows have hold on me.
No more will darkness cling to my being
'cause you reign victorious over everything.
You are alive.
'Cause you caused to blind to see,
and the deaf to hear.
You see the broken-hearted
and You hold them near.
You heal the open wounds
caused by our iniquities.
You break the chains that bind us
and the darkness has to flee.
You set us free.

You gave me life, You gave me life,
You gave me life, You gave me life,
You gave me life, You set me free.
(Repeat)

'Cause you caused the blind to see
and the deaf to hear.
You see the broken-hearted
and You hold them near.
You heal the open wounds
caused by our iniquities.
You break the chains that bind us
and the darkness has to flee.
You set us free.
