Take a look at our fucking so-called elite...
Serenely gazing at us stumble in the shit they let us in.
Too busy counting out their notes to hold out a hand.
Expecting us to stay still, without protest...
With our fates behind control, without saying a word.
But soon the voices of anger will be raising,
voices of people united against upper class supremacy announcing the end of disparity...

Cause it's always the same old story.
precarious and unhealthy housings.
Lower class branded and stranded...
It's amazing to see this vulgar indifference,
disrespectful, rude, unloading our essential needs.
And we got to be content with shanty towns
and morose shades of gray,
they're expecting us to stay still, taking things easy
