Where it all began
Well I don't really care
There's plenty of faces along the way
Who'd be glad to place me there

Was it your fault or just my fault
Well it don't matter any more
You carve our names on window panes
And leave them scattered on the floor

If the melody escapes
I will stumble on it soon
If it's not a rhapsody
Well it'll just have to do

Well look at who's crying now
I can't forget your name
There's plenty of strangers along the way
Who'd be glad to pass the blame

If it's my fault, I'll pay the cost
You'd be the one to keep the score
And carve our names on window frames
And leave them scattered by the door

If the melody escapes
I will stumble upon it soon
If it's not a rhapsody
The memory have to do

First you said you love me
Then you change your mind
I wish I could hear it
One more time

If it's my fault, I'll pay the cost
You'd be the one to keep the score
You carved our names on window frames
The letters scattered by the door

If the melody escapes
I will stumble on it soon

If it's not a rhapsody
The memory have to do
