"Daylight"

I wont let you down 'cause you stopped my thoughts
The scenery around you becomes your war Strangers in the room pictures on the wall inside your eyes

Sunsets and skyline mornings break while you're still sleeping in Still white and strangely distant daylight dries on your lawn

I will hold your hand until the sun goes down
The factories surrounding have run aground Suburban baby dreams she can grow a garden in her hand

Sunsets and skyline mornings break while you're still
sleeping in

Still white and strangely distant daylight dries on your
lawn

sleeping in
Still white and strangely distant daylight dries on your
lawn

Reflections in the smoke from the other side
A thousand miles from home and you're feeling tired
The traffic stops the street from becoming lonely highway nights
