Blindness never felt this good before
Kindness deadly but precious, like a child's reward
Been lately crushed lik pills and cut into thin lines

Hold your horses and please don't do anything you would regret
Hold your horses and just tell your heart to take it step by step
And if you're patient baby stand by me till I am ready
One day I will lay your path will roses

So used to being confused I am hooked on memories
With open wounds the size of black holes that never heal
You could have had me eating from your hand
But instead you said

Hold your horses and please don't do anything you would regret
Hold your horses and just tell your heart to take it step by step
And if you're patient baby stand by me till I am ready
One day I will lay your path will roses

Hold your horses and please keep your cards much closer to your chest
Hold your horses let's not run before we dare to dance again
And if you're patient baby have trust in all that can be
Time will tell if that's what has been chosen

Numb and comfortable in that web of sticky lies
I watched the world sending signs I couldn't move I couldn't smile
Paralysed by fear I could be happy. by your side

Hold your horses and please don't do anything you would regret
Hold your horses and just tell your heart to take it step by step
And if you're patient baby stand by me till I am ready
One day I will lay your path will roses

Hold your horses and please keep your cards much closer to your chest
Hold your horses let's not run before we dare to dance again
And if you're patient baby have trust in all that can be

Time will tell if that's what has been chosen
