Strange thief shoots an arrow
At my chest brushes my soul
Through the air
Stabs my heart
Puts life itself in danger

Wounds burn when he steals
When he pulls
I cannot be at peace
All strung up in strangers' nets

Though the skies
Are in his eyes
In the clear blue one can see far
Searching for gold milking the earth
With fierce, frozen fists

Reluctance like a constant keen
No one dares to defy
A habit of thieving is like the ocean
Never stops it's motion

Dangerous, so dangerous
Dangerous, so dangerous
So dangerous, dangerous
So dangerous, dangerous
So dangerous
To me
