your kiss
is as, you would imagine is,
soft as flower petals
cold as razor blades

your kiss
when you press your lips it peels the wrist from my skin it turns my outsides in how can I hope to resist how do I without it exist

days and nights and dreams are sacrificed to just this oh, how I miss

is so delicious
still as April twilight
white as arsenic

your kiss
when you close your eyes it forces tighter mine
it hollows me inside

in so deliberate
shards and slivers
is breaking in tiny pieces, me bit by bit (so sad) so fragile me piece by piece (so sad) so brittle me kiss by kiss (so sad) so empty me bit by bit (so sad) in tiny pieces me

your kiss
is so irresistible
so very serious
a calculated risk

your mouth, your lips with such precision tearing in tiny pieces, me

how do I hope to resist
