When I told you you're the color splash in my day of gray,
what I really meant is you leave me in heart-skippin'
disarray.
Your words, "Good morning sunshine", I always wake
to find.
You had me believin' when I was dreamin',
I was always on your mind.

And now we ebb and flow,
and we come and go
but whenever we say goodbye,
I get so lovesick I could die.

When I said I love the old-fashioned letters that we send,
what I really meant is I wanna be so much more than friends.
Remember when I told you that the distance makes me
brave?
What I really meant is it's your attention that I crave.

And now we ebb and flow, and we come and go
but whenever we say goodbye, I get so lovesick I could die.
And now we ebb and flow, and I won't let you know that whenever we say goodbye, I get so lovesick I could die.

And even if the sun should set on our tomorrow,
Even if time proves you were only mine to borrow,
No regrets. From the first night that we met,

I placed my bet, the best gamble yet.
You're the kind I will never forget.

And now we ebb and flow, and we come and go
but whenever we say goodbye, I get so lovesick I could
die.
And now we ebb and flow, and I won't let you know that whenever we say goodbye, I get so lovesick I could die.

Mmm, let me tell ya, when I look into those eyes,

I see everything I need, just looking back at me.
Holding me, caressing me,
all behind that pale green...

And now we ebb and flow, and we come and go
but whenever we say goodbye, I get so lovesick I could
die.

And now we ebb and flow, and I won't let you know that
whenever we say goodbye, I get so lovesick I could die.

When I said you make me lovesick, don't take it the wrong way.

What I really meant is I hope goodbye is only for today.
