It's been awhile since I spoke like a human Haven't seen you in over a decade and haven't talked since I moved
And I the whole town _?_ telling me you've been bad Grieving over the fact that you're losing your baby's dad
But it's not just that, you're farther into the crack Heard you're walking a track and marching into the trash
Fuck praying, 'cause I've been silent for years
I'm sick of trying to be a man about it; Hiding my tears
And fuck the judgment, I've got a messed up past But when asked or confronted, I shut down fast
And the truth is, girl I cry when I think of you And write a million songs that imma never get to sing with you Talk about the places imma never get to bring you to Show you what it's like to build a life and learn a thing or two
What hurts me is that I love you, 'cause you're my older sister
The only girl that I can rock with Mom's so down when I ask and dad's so sad

That I don't know if he's ever gonna get past it And really, I'm finding it hard for me to manage Any close relationships without the fear of vanishing
All of this has been hard, I ain't denying it I'm writing down this song as a product of my violence
But listen, they say that family is everything It's more than just a house, two dogs and a wedding ring
It's blossoming life and standing up to anything Trying to take the people that you love to what it's meant to be Yeah, so then where'd you go?
Prisoner in your body quarantined from your soul
And I know those drugs got you out in the cold Got you spitting in the mouth of those showing you hope
So if you'd ever come through to your senses

I'll be write here, waiting for a _?_
