Sorrow's child, sits by the river
Sorrow's child, hears not the water
Sorrow's child, sits by the river
Sorrow's child, hears not the water

And just when it seems as though
You've got strength enough to stand, sorrow's child
Sorrow's child, all weak and strange
Stands waiting at your hand

Sorrow's child, steps in the water
Sorrow's child, you follow after
Sorrow's child, wades in deeper
Sorrow's child, invites you under

And just when you thought as though
All your tears were wept and done, sorrow's child
Sorrow's child, grieves not what has passed
But all the past still yet to come
Sorrow's child, sits by the water
Sorrow's child, and your arms enfold her
Sorrow's child, you're loathe to befriend her
Sorrow's child, but in sorrow surrender

And just when it's seems as though
All your tears were at an end, sorrow's child
Sorrow's child, lifts up her hand
And she brings it down again

Sorrow's child
Sorrow's child
Sorrow's child
