

Bell Fable "Ergo"

Visit "Ergo" on MotoLyrics.com

you're imprinted in my life like a melody that lives in the breath of me all lit up like a lantern from the lightness glowing inside of you

oh it's my own fault , i believed my own thoughts over your words and it makes me gasp and few things do that how i'm so very drunk on the the need for you now i live in this ghost town where you're the mayor and i'm the lone citizen oh but you're living elsewhere and you don't really care about the unholy mess i'm in now

what i thought was true was time passing to you til you found your true way and you gave our today for tomorrow's what may and i'm the price that you'll pay for the past you won't face

you're imprinted in my life
like a photograph tattooed on the heart of me all lit up like a hot coal in my cold soul burning it's was through me.

a memory more real than anything i feel after because
of you
a memory more real than anything i feel after because
of you

a memory more real than anything i feel after because
of you
a memory more real than anything i feel after because
of you

Visit Bell Fable page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.

