Capricious, oh Capricious lonely as the wind blows jump the tracks between us they're twisting up tornados from the deepest darkened bellows to the highest aspiration

beauty at the window break the ties that blind us we're losing all our rainbows to chaos and the storm
like some unwelcome guest ever since we were breathing since the morning we were born fed love and evil from all sides till the morning when we learn how to laugh and cry in strides how to grow then watch it burn

from your mean green walls of memory all hidden deep within your chest long lava roads lay between us but the cross roads sends back its best with a river to remind us

just how lost a lover gets without a river to remind her she's likely to forget and just roll on past tomorrow

ever since we were feeling since the evening we were one
how give and take in strides
