He comes, he goes
With my highs, my lows
And as he walks away from me,
I've forgotten how to breathe again
Why'd he leave again?

She comes, she goes
My heart she knows
How to push me 'til I bleed,
And when I started believe again
She always leaves again

He pulls the rug from under me
Just when I thought I could breathe
And then
He leaves again

Our lips in touch
For too long, it's far too much
Finding clarity in pain
Finding tears amongst the rain

It's all the same

I still scar for her
My still heart still hurts
Did I bring this on myself?
Was she more than just compelled to stay?
Yet she walked away

She hides the light away from me
Just when I started to see
And then
She leaves again

He pulls the rug from under me just when I thought I could breathe and then he leaves again
She hides the light away from me just when I thought I could see and then she leaves again

He(she) comes, he(she) goes
