you got a hole inside your heart bigger than what you could ever hide and people stop and look right through saying something must have torn you, just torn you apart and in the morning you get dressed you put your make up on and wait for something to change
'cause the day you stop trying, well thats the day you start dying

look out look out
your dreams are dripping down your soul like alcohol you better pick 'em up real quick you better make something o' this 'cause you're not here to sing anybody else's goddam dream
no , you're not here to sing anybody else's goddam

you walk the same streets everyday but the faces see that you're just following something you follow follow everything down just follow follow everything down

look out look out
the sky is falling on it's knees again and it will tell you everything you really really thought you had to be but you're not here to sing anybody else's goddam
