Tugs

From your straining lungs

Under the sweating sun

as you're puddle leaping dodging though the rush

Crushed

Under a leaden chest

Trying to catch what's left of the breath that's slipping, tearing through your flesh

Taking the good that's left

Using the flame you get

Feeling the weight of it

There's hope in the shambles

There's hope in the shambles

There's hope...

Stuck

Swallowed into space

Trying to find your faith

As it shivers with the stormy break and

Drained

From your freezing toes

To your empty soul

Finding warmth is now bereft to the open

Feeling the sunlights grace

Soaking into your face

Taking it day by day

There's hope in the shambles

There's hope in the shambles

There's hope in the broken

There's hope against all hope

There's hope...
