pearls of sweat are covering my face adrenalin pumping through my veins I'm not ready for this chase a victim of an element which gives us our life can also take it back like the blade of a knife above me a distorted picture, beneath me it's black painful freezing water like pins and needles in my back this pressure to my head, the wish of being dead fills my body with pain, reproaches I've been fed wrong directions I've been led, blood freezing in my veins

they say that life passes in front of you before you die I know now it's true but the question is why the deeper I sink, the darker it gets feeling cramps in my body, no oxygen left eyelids slowly closing, death grabbed me by the neck forced me to the other side, I am no longer wet
