red room, red room.
stop, stop and think about it, purification of race.
what was the color of your blood the last time you checked?
this brought on by hate, leaves you seeking.
this seeking leaves your questions unanswered.
impatient, you take matters into your own.
come to think about it ignorance won't leave you alone.
nevermind, you're all one kind,
you think at this rate you'll never be left behind.
"racial equality, there's no such thing." you said.
"that's funny, your broken nose bleeding proves your blood to be red..."
i am full of anger, i am full of hate.
forget i wasn't always like this, i've cleaned my own
slate.
i am full of anger, i am full of hate.
forget i wasn't always like this, i've cleaned my own
slate.
purify your heart, give up your hate!
purify your mind, give up your hate!
purify your focus, give up your hate!
purify your self, give up your hate!
purify your heart, give up your hate!
purify your mind, give up your hate!
purify your focus, give up your hate!
purify your self, give up your hate!
purify my blood Jesus, with the blood that you've bled...
purify my blood Jesus, with Your blood that is oh so red...
purify my blood Jesus, with the blood that you've bled...
purify my blood Jesus, with Your blood that is red...
your time on earth is limited.
is there a need to spend it in hatred?
you have a chance to hold eternity in your hands.
to every race this is sacred.
no need to look any further.
your questions are too deep.
no need to continue hatred if all you do is weep.
look to Jesus Christ and get down on your knees.
ask Him into your heart and to cleanse all your sleeze.
purify your heart, give up your hate!

purify your self, give up your hate!
purify your heart, give up your hate!
purify your mind, give up your hate!
purify your self, give up your hate!
stop and think about it, you were saved by His grace.
what was the color of His blood as it ran down His face?
