You whisper in this darkened room
A bedtime interlude
For little smiles, and baby blues
How did I ever deserve you?

My Everything, I think of you
In every meantime
When all is lost and I feel weak
I see this dream right in front of me

A lullaby to sooth her mind
She rubs her sleepy eyes her tiny hand inside of mine
How could I ever desert you?

The slightest breath, a sleeping head
So perfectly defined

I close my eyes, and take a breath
And say a prayer for her instead

My Everything, I think of you
In every meantime
When all is lost and I feel weak
I see this dream right in front of me

She smiles wide and sings to me
Her voice so sweetly
This melody so intertwined
She is the dream right in front of me

She turns her head, and snuggles deep
The covers warm and neat
A gentle kiss upon my cheek
As she slowly drifts so sleep
