I found myself a dwelling place, a circumstance in time, when first I caught a breath of you, and your eyes took note of mine.

Your spirit fell all around me, like a breeze upon the sand, a heart composed of love and grace, beholden
in your hands.

In all my breaths, I've loved you still, and I always will,
I'll forget you never.

A thousand thoughts had filled our days, of things
we've shared and seen, it seemed like only yesterday,
when fate called you to me.

I don't know where tomorrow lies, when wings of time will near, or if my mind will lose its will, to speak your name once more.

In all my breaths, I've loved you still, and I always will,
I'll forget you never.

If sundown waits upon the sill, my heart will know you still, I will never be without you.

In all my breaths, I've loved you still, and I always will,
I'll forget you never. Yes I'll forget you never.
