Must wait for the moment you walk in.
Lift the pavements, spin a thousand carousels.
I can't hope any longer so you win.
You got dreams, but you keep 'em to yourself.
We can only break so much 'til what's 'left is not enough.

And I'd tell you all about it, but the oxygen keeps
getting in my way and I can't bare the fight.
Well I'd rather live without it 'cause it kills me that you
sleep when I'm awake.
Oh it's so clear that it's too late.

Now I'm right back at the point where we went wrong.
With these all familiar circles one again.
Well I'd rather be a mess than be alone.
Rather settle for what we have than dream of what we could've been
We can only take so much, till what's left is not enough

And I'd tell you all about it, but the oxygen keeps
getting in my way and I can't bare the fight.
Well I'd rather live without it cause it kills me that you
sleep when I'm awake.
Oh it's so clear that it's too late.

In this paralyzing silence, this breath we can't escape.
We've lost ourselves with nowhere left to run.
There's no comfort in the quiet, no together in the pain.
If I found a path to save us, would you come?

Woohooohooohoo Wohohohoooho

Well I'd tell you all about it but the oxygen keeps getting in my way and I can't bare the fight.
I would rather live without it cause it kills me that you
sleep when I'm awake.
Oh it's so clear that it's too late.

Must wait for the moment you walk in.
Lift the pavements spin a thousand carousels.
