Let the walls fall down
Let the walls fall down
Let the walls fall down
Let the walls fall down

Let your eyes dream a dream of separation
Like the tides pass over a naked conscience
Lift your eyes to the clouds that paint
This typical scene of another day
That you've tossed away
to the rays of starlight and it's tales of fate
Let yourself face a time of the unknown
Take a step away from destiny
Well, I know that no one likes to feel
Out of control, but

Let the walls fall down
Let the walls fall down
Let the walls fall down
Let the walls fall down
Let the walls fall

You hold your life
To the pattern of stars, lift your gaze
And you've dressed this with lace ribbon
Oh, what a sight
Lift your gaze

Let your heart breathe a breath of trepidation
Like the waves wash over a tattered shoreline
Lift your sleeves, show the scars that paint
This typical scene of a better day
That you've thrown away
To the slaves of starlight and its tales of fate
Let yourself face your own interrogation
Take a step away from apathy
Well, I know that no one likes to feel
Put in their place, but

Let the walls fall down
Let the walls fall down
Let the walls fall down

Let the walls fall down
Let the walls fall

You hold your life
To the pattern of stars, lift your gaze
And you've dressed this with lace ribbon
Oh, what a sight
Lift your gaze
Dream a dream of separation
Like the tides pass over a naked conscience
Lift your eyes to the clouds that paint
This typical scene of another day

Lift your gaze
Lift your gaze
Lift your gaze
