I can see her now
clear as i did then
there in my rearview
painting on her lips
bare feet on the dash late hot summer night
she liked to tell me no but she loved for me to try

we were going nowhere
trying to cross that line
we were having and wasting
the time of our lives
lost in the moment
but we didn't care
we were running wild
and going nowhere

five bucks in the tank
of primar gray and rust never took us all the way but we got far enough sweet lies in the dark
the promises we made were thin as all mere because when november came everything changed

we were running wild

we were running wild
going nowhere
going nowhere
