He pushed her in the alley, and he tried to lay her low
He grabbed her in the dark, this story must be told
She looked him in the eye and his blood ran cold
She said, I know a little story, and this story must be told."

But it's lies, lies, we never heard about it
Lies, lies, and we don't want to know
Lies, lies, we'll never listen

You're a dirty little liar and we don't want to know
His guts were in a knot but her voice it would not stop
She shattered with her chatter all his dreams and all his thoughts

She licked him with her tongue and she tore him with her claws

He beat her and he begged her but he could not make her stop

Nine times she bellyed over him, nine times in the foam she rose

She ripped away his soul like he ripped away her clothes

She said, I know a little story and this story must be told."

He tried to hide, he wandered down the road
He threw away everything that he owned, still he could not bear the load

He grabbed me when I met him and my blood it ran cold

He said, "I know a little story, and this story must be told."

But it's lies, lies, we never heard about it
Lies, lies, and we don't want to know
Lies, lies, we'll never listen

You're a dirty little liar and we don't want to know

He rolled his eyes, he laughed and he cried, he said I'd kill myself if I was still alive

He reamed me out with a tongue like sand, cursing in a language that nobody understands

"There she blows!" he turned and he cried, pointing to the centre of an empty sky

There she is, my Lady true! Her laughter cuts my heart in two!

Her eyes are blank, her face is stone! Leave me alone!
Leave me alone!
She shattered with her chatter all my dreams and all my thoughts
She licked me with her tongue and she tore me with her claws
She ripped away my soul like I ripped away her clothes
She said, I know a little story and this story must be told.

In the light I see, nothing left of me, when the darkness falls, I will see it all
