Once upon a time there was a young girl
And a boy that told her she was his world
It was filled with roses and guitars
She believed he was the north star
He sang like a beautiful prince
Through the apple of original sin
Dripping poison fell from his lips
Tell me a story, storyteller

Mirror, mirror wherever you are
Your stories will never be far
Tell me one of your fairy tales
Storyteller, oh storyteller

Another time she became a woman
And that boy took her to his own land
It was filled with shadows and despair
He never said his princess was there
These dreams are no longer mine
I'll wake up and say goodbye
Leaving this old story behind
Tell me a story, storyteller

Mirror, mirror wherever you are
Your stories will never be far
Tell me one of your fairy tales
Storyteller, oh storyteller

INSTRUMENTAL BREAK

Mirror, mirror wherever you are
Your stories will never be far
Tell me one of your fairy tales
Storyteller, oh storyteller

Mirror, mirror wherever you are
Your stories will never be far
Tell me one of your fairy tales
Storyteller, oh storyteller
Storyteller, oh storyteller
