

AT LONG LAST "San Francisco Dreams"

Visit "San Francisco Dreams" on MotoLyrics.com

Remember the time when forever came hand in hand?
Fighting the summer on a train wreck to make amends Falling apart, looking forward to find some gorilla glue Singing songs about fortunes and forgottens, that made me and you
You have stolen my heart, the sad thing is you can take it
But I'll ribbon it up in a box

So don't you forget these San Francisco Dreams, It's hard to swallow because it cuts at the seams, light your match and burn all the memories;
And I hope to God that you're safe in his arms, I won't forget that charm, the smile that kept me warm, all the summer nights that got me through And the night I lost you

So read me your poems, make me jealous of your lines Twiddle with my thumbs, tell me it's alright
I know you're far away and lost, but I'm right here at home
Hoping for a sunset to bring you back into my arms Even though I've heard that your Romeo is quite the catch

I won't forget those San Francisco Dreams
Don't forget me

Visit AT LONG LAST page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.