You should write this down because this is the last time
I'll say it I'm not a part of you any more, I don't belong to you anymore
Do you feel ashamed of what you're running away from?
While the prints are behind your feet, you run your mouth just like you're next to me So think it through.

She mailed the post cards to my address, I pictured her wearing that red dress over the Zeppelin t-shirt that I somehow managed to never get back As I struggled to open the envelope, it turns out that my eyes can develop a scope I zoomed in on the line that says "I'm leaving, and I'm not coming back."
And you're probably thinking I should be sad but!

Thank God that my heart's in the ground, never once been touched, just safe and sound Thank God that you've got it all wrong, know the back of my head sings the sweetest song Thank God that you didn't love me, cause honey please know, that I never loved you I know you will be back in the morning, so just keep in mind that I was ready to end it to.

I've got a bone to pick with you, so light your match and let it shine through Remember the bear that you got me for Valentine's Day? Well I ripped his head off As the cotton fell to the floor, I felt much better than I had been before I felt as if a weight had been lifted off of my back as a matter of fact And you're probably thinkin' I should be scared, no

Is it asking too much to start over again?
I'm not asking too much just asking to pretend that we didn't lose it all, that it wasn't the end Or will I wear my poker face until then
