Summer blooms and feels so cold
My bed is empty, you're with the girl next door
I said I love you for a million times
You turned your back to me and said goodbye.

I've been walking down the streets and baby
I can't seem to find my path
Your touch remains in every memory
The love you gave me is worth a life.

Because all of the memories I keep in this box
Are trembling in circles, they can't ever take off
A mirror from the past always made me feel lost
Should I surrender if your love is gone

Winter came my heart still warm
You were far away, I was home alone
I'd follow you for a thousand miles
I lost the one who brought all the light

Every night I miss you like crazy
All my body was your land
How to forget your burning lips baby
When all the others have frozen mouths

Because all of the memories I keep in this box
Are trembling in circles, they can't ever take off
All of the memories we built up one day
Are sinking, like roses, black roses
Into oceans in pain.

Because all of the memories we keep in this box
Are trembling in circles, they can't ever take off
A mirror from the past always made me feel lost
Should I surrender,
It's no season love
