Somehow, I found a way to keep me warm.
It's not the hot cocoa or whiskey soda,
I tried 'em both before.
You know they heat me up and tell me, "time is up!"
And leave me colder than before.
Now I'm feeling something really I can not ignore.

And I'm thinking it's you,
As I walk along this evening.
I'm thinking it's you,
How the colors change when you're walking through the door.
Well, with you for the first time I think I won't mistake
the feeling, no.
And with you, we're getting warmer than before.

Now I'll admit to a, a little bit of a wandering in the past,
With a jump start and a half heart and a maybe this will last.
But oh no, all the days of the wide escapes are getting old so fast.
Through the mire, I built a fire and hope it's some day gonna last.

And I'm hoping on you,
As I walk along this evening.
I'm thinking that you are the music to this dance across the floor.
How with you for the first time I won't mistake the feeling, no.
And with you, we're getting warmer than before.

Cool, calm, collected 'cause I'm fire proof.
Tell me have you felt that too?
What I want, want to know, want to know, want to know
is do you,
Do you feel like something's burning like I do, yeah?

So, I'm counting on you,
As I walk along this evening.
I'm thinking of you with your records on when I'm walking through your door.

With you for the first time I think I won't mistake the feeling, no.

And with you, we're getting warmer than before.

So much warmer than before, we're getting warmer yeah.
