Don't dare try to kiss me and tell me that it just ain't true

I saw you last night talking to the girl you told me you outgrew

You know how I am and how I like to keep an open mind
And I wouldn't like to give the impression I'm of the jealous kind.

I'm well aware that talkin isn't known to be a major crime

And boy should I know, cause I do it time and time
And though the evidence is really only circumstantial
But however if I think too deep it could turn quite substantial.

Is this deceit?

Is this deceit?

Or coincidental you two should meet

Is this deceit?

Is this deceit?

Cause co-incidentally can't stand a cheat

I'm never one to act on impulse, I prefer to wait and while I'm sitting here now, I'm doing my best to differentiate

Is my man for real, or is he just a fakin two-timer
Am I making a mountain out of something that is relatively minor.

I always try to think twice before I ever like to start a quarrel

So a very close eye on my man will be my latest moral
And should any of his out-grown girls come within my beady eye

And a chirpy chirping starts I'll tell my man he can go fly.

Is this deceit?

Is this deceit?

Or coincidental you two should meet

Is this deceit?

Is this deceit?

Cause co-incidentally can't stand a cheat.
