"Missing Your Heart"

It's really not important
Cause your mind is somewhere else
And you're busy with your numbers
Drowning in yourself
And it really doesn't matter
Cause your eyes are on the clock
And now your feet are tapping to the rhythm
But very soon they'll walk
You think it's done, but it didn't even start
Passing by your ear and missing your heart
And it's really not important
You have troubles of your own
And your mind is on the weekend
And all the things to do back home
So when she tells you of her sorrow
When her soul becomes unsealed
She may be foolish, but she's hoping
For a small crack in your shield
You think she's done, but she didn't even start
Passing by your ear and missing your heart
And me, I only want to hold you
And to tell you it's ok
Though it really makes me sad
Every time you turn away
You think we're done, but we didn't even start
Passing by your ear and missing your heart
