My miracle
My every hope
The incredible
Light you bring

I'm losing you

I know our time is short
And I wont watch you grow
Soon I'll fade away and I'll have to let you go

They'll call to you, and conceal their lust
They bred filth into what is intimate
Their clever lies, may tug you heart
You see they deceive untill you're torn apart

The weight I can't bear, thoughts of no one there
No rush to your call, no help through it all

My rage
My discontent
How can I keep my hope when I do not feel it

Where are the men who feel as I do
In a world of cowards who will protect you

What of our sisters our daughters our mothers
What kind of men are we to leave amidst their troubles

Where is my comfort to leave the ones I love
My anger brews knowing she can't walk alone

You Feel it too

When cries for violence come fight for those you love
In distain we unify, it will be enough

I wont always be there to shield you from their jeers
The beauty you become, I wish that I could be there
Take rest in knowing that I don't stand alone,
I would be there for you wherever you would go
