I watched her stare turn to rage as she looked up to the sky and cried out Where have you gone?
Cause I don't feel you here with me
My cup was running over,
Now all these thoughts run over me
And I can't see
Or understand why in your plan don't you allow to me some relief
Cant you take this from me?
Why don't you ever intervene?
Only One who can raise the sun, why is it darkness has fallen upon me?
In the silence, beneath the tall cliff, without vision, a sheep is wandering
No noise to hear, or signal you are near, to scare off death when the wolves surround me My friend, once I waited for death
All wounds, given time, will eventually mend I looked to the west where the sun had left, I waited for the night to take me away I couldn't recognize that in my plight, it wasn't death but goodbyes that I feared take pride in your life to honor those not here Now death is all she sees, its her reality, how can she believe, when theres no end in sight
The night feels so long, please continue on, remember the value of your life
The longer the night the closer the morning
With eyes fixed west you can't watch the rising sun Long for what is gone and you'll miss what is sure to come
We question demanding answers, are we listening?
For simple answers, like the whisper that dawn is approaching
