Find What You're Looking For

Growing up, out on the prairie Growing up, you want to be married Oh my darling, I see you waiting and your time is coming
The hours are running into days that will pass away
Come the morning I'll be leaving on a plane

You've heard the stories but you've never slept a night in a tall building You've heard the names and thought that you might like the same To find what you're looking for, to come back just once more

And in their faces, I can see the way it was before the war
The gateless gate, the teachers holding the open door
And in these dirty moments, dull confusion rattles us
awake
Churning, trying to undo our first mistake

Growing up on right and wrong Growing up, we're raised on fighting All our honor, a fleeting feeling that goes out with the tide
It rises up and settles down and leaves us lying in confusion
We grasp for air and reach out grabbing for illusion

To find what we're looking for, we come back just once more

And in their faces, I can see the way it was before the
The gateless gate, the teachers holding the open door
And in these dirty moments, dull confusion rattles us
awake
Churning, trying to undo our first mistake

Coming here, to find what we're looking for

We come back just once more
