"Reasoning from the common course of nature, and without supposing any new interposition of the supreme cause, which ought always be excluded from philosophy; what is incorruptible must also be ingenerable.

The soul, therefore, if immortal, existed before our birth:

And if the former state of existence no wise concerned us, neither will the latter."

[David Hume]

There is no comfort in the idea of the eternal soul to me

How could it live on without the experience of the colour of the sea?

If Heaven was to be an empty white sphere

Devoid of anything that you could taste or feel-without feeling need

Then I take more comfort in the idea

That one day my eyes will cease to see what's right there in front of me

Are you prepared to face the one big question: Have you lived everyday as if it had been your last?

If Heaven was to be a blank projection screen for all your most secret dreams: What would you see?

What would you see?

What would be on Heaven TV?

What would you see?

What would you see?

All that you never dared

All the things you were to scared to try

You haven't lived everyday as if it had been your last

The infamous inventors of eternity have ruled our lives long enough

They refuse to see that we are animals

We need to feed, fight, sleep and make love

Have you lived everyday as if it had been your last?

Have you lived everyday as if it had been your last?

They refuse to see that we are animals

We need to feed, fight, sleep and make love

And I tell you one thing: When all you put on the table falls short of all your great promises

Then I don't want my share in any of this
