These are the secrets you will share
These are the words you cannot bear
This is the sight you'll never see
And that you have forgotten me

The voice that tempted you away
The deepest hole in which I stay
I miss you most, my darkest hour
I'm wondering where the hell you are

Too late to tell you you were wrong
Another word to dwell upon
You could have waited for me
Like I was waiting just for you

The fuses flicker in his eye
Her touch to blow me open wide
I could have run a million times
But I was waiting for you

And did you ever stop to think
About how low that you could sink?
And down the low, our deepest sigh
Within yourself you cannot hide

Do photographs and faces lie?
Why did I never wonder why
Why I was waiting for you
Why I was waiting for you?
Waiting for you

[Incomprehensible]
