I' ve packed my life in a bag Boxes named my past Sitting in my now so empty room With a plane-ticket in my hand

I' ve said goodbye to my best friend
He said â€□take care dear, I hope I see you againâ€□
I' m starring at the one-way ticket in my hand
I' ve decided to leave and never come back

This town has taken too much from me
Oh I think I failed my youth
The nights I cried he whispered softly â€□One day we' II start something newâ€□

And those pills and mirrors are choking me I can' t seem to stand myself
Those scars and memories are killing me
All those long nights with demons in my head

l' m reading those familiar words Written up on my walls With a one-way plane ticket in my hand l' ve decided to leave And l' m never coming back

Oh no I can' t come back here no more (It' s time to let it go)
Oh my youth is killing me
It' s killing
(It' s time to start something new)

I need to find some kind of piece $(l\hat{a} \in \mathbb{T}^m \text{ m leaving tonight})$ Is there some kind of piece within me? $l\hat{a} \in \mathbb{T}^m \text{ m leaving tonight, } l\hat{a} \in \mathbb{T}^m \text{ m leaving, } l\hat{a} \in \mathbb{T}^m \text{ m leaving (I need to find my way)}$ And I can $\hat{a} \in \mathbb{T}^m \text{ t come back}$ No $l\hat{a} \in \mathbb{T}^m \text{ m never coming back}$

l' ve packed my life in a bag

Holding a plane ticket in the other hand Well goodbye then, dear old past $l\hat{a} \in \mathbb{T}^m$ m leaving tonight And $l\hat{a} \in \mathbb{T}^m$ m never coming back
