There you are, waiting at the station
Searching frantically the place where you belong
Gave you a map that showed you your direction
A shadow tore it up and told you it was wrong
"That way's too long, and that's still in the zone"
Come into the air and guest your body like a care
You belong nowhere and you can't bear it
Come into the air and guest your body like a care
Life just isn't fair if you can't share it
So I not dare it!

Feed your eyes on cold grey city concrete
An extra pair of arms is what you really need
But keep the secret, today no one can touch you
Dine on passion, then let your heart bleed
Alone at night it's dark, hear a lonely dog bark
Come into the air and guest your body like a care
You belong nowhere and you can't bear it
Come into the air and guest your body like a care
Life just isn't fair if you can't share it
So I not dare it!

Come into the air and guest your body like a care
You belong nowhere and you can't bear it
Come into the air, guest your body like a care
Life just isn't fair if you can't share it
So I not dare it!

Come into the air, guest your body like a care
You belong nowhere, so you can't bear it
Come into the air, guest your body like a care
Life just isn't fair if you can't share it
So I not dare it!

Come into the air, guest your body like a care
You belong nowhere, so you can't bear it
Come into the air, guest your body like a care
Life just isn't fair if you can't share it
So I not dare it!
