How do you watch the end of an era that you walked in on during the fall
And appreciate and mourn the loss
Like the ones that were involved?
Cause you know your heart is your home
And it's the only place you'll stay
When home becomes a heartache
What can you do to get away?

Sometimes it's not enough to say
That things will work out in the end
Cause you have been torn to rags and shreds
By pain I cannot comprehend
And even to this very day
As your heart's still trying to mend
Just know that you still thrive in mine
In the memories we suspend

So how much heart and soul does it take
To show what makes up all your dreams?
There's blood and sweat and tears of regret and nothing is quite what it seems Because these songs contain a part of us
As vital as breath in our lungs
And to watch you fall apart like that Feels like the greatest song left unsung

Sometimes it's not enough to say
That things will work out in the end
Cause you have been torn to rags and shreds
By pain I cannot comprehend
And even to this very day
As your heart's still trying to mend
Just know that you still thrive in mine
In the memories we suspend

Who's to say that this should be the beginning of the end?
What's a bottle or three of Jack
When heartache is my best friend
In the end...

Sometimes itâ€™s not enough to say
That things will work out in the end
Cause you have been torn to rags and shreds
By pain I cannot comprehend
And even to this very day
As your heartâ€™s still trying to mend
Just know that you still thrive in mine
In the memories we can suspend

In the memories we can pretend...
