"The Burden Of Goodbye"

I can't believe love brought us here.
This place is so damn cold,
And all the pain that I once feared
Is underlined in bold.

There is a match inside this heart
Of mine that won't ignite
If I can't breathe without you girl,
I guess you win; you're right.

Â

There's no way that I can tolerate all of this suffering
inside.

My heart's rusted, and it's overweight with this burden
of goodbye.

Â

I set out just to write a song
To help me through the week.
This blood and paper does no wrong,
But my chest feels antique.
There is a breath inside these lungs
That's dying just to shout.
If you can't live inside my heart,
Why won't you just get out?

Â

There's no way that I can tolerate all of this suffering
inside.

My heart's rusted, and it's overweight with this burden
of goodbye.

"It's not you; it's me."
Received on a tiny candy heart,
But everytime I think of you,
I'm right back to the start.
It's not you; it's me.

We're just not meant to be,
But every time I think of you,

Â

I can't believe love brought us here.
This place is so damn cold,
And all the pain that I once feared is real.

Â

There's no way that I can tolerate all of this suffering
inside.

My heart's rusted, and it's overweight with this burden
of goodbye.
With this burden of goodbye.
Goodbye.
