She walks in through the door,
I got my hands in my pocket and my eyes on the floor.
This isn't how it should be.
And every night I'm awake in bed,
I got a ringing in my ears and a song in my head.
What is she doing to me?

I stare up at the stars,
And make the same old wish,
That I'd give anything to get one kiss.
So I don't understand I'd like this,
When she walks by.

And I know just what I should say,
But I can't get it out before she walks away,
And the words seem to come,
But they die on my tongue,
So all I do is pray I won't be speechless someday.

Friends say that I should give her up,
Cause she's crushing my heart like a Dixie cup,
But I just can't let it go,
How can I let her know?
That I can't find the words to express how I feel,
Cause the feeling she gives me is so surreal,
That I'd choke on my words like they're my last meal,
I can't deny.

And I know just what I should say,
But I can't get it out before she walks away,
And the words seem to come,
But they die on my tongue,
So all I do is pray I won't be speechless someday.

I'd walk for miles to see her smile,
Yeah, I'd do anything for you,
What can I do to make her mine?

And I know just what I should say,
But I can't get it out before she walks away.

And I know just what I should say,

But I can't get it out before she walks away,
And the words seem to come,
But they die on my tongue,
So all I do is,
So many things I just can't say it.
All I do is pray.
